

May I have a snack, mum?

Children in different parts of the world eat snacks you might find surprising. They may not be something your mum would offer you.

Unscramble the words to find out what children in different countries eat.

1. If you were an Ewondo child in Cameroon, your mother might reward you with these from a palm tree:

r i f d e s r g u b ->

2. When Gabbra kids in Ethiopia want a treat, their mothers give them crispy, fried chunks of:

o t a g a t f ->

3. Morning, noon and night, Rendille children in Kenya drink this as their main meal and snack:

m e c a l k i l m ->
